Kihavah Travel Notes

for your Maldivian adventure

Destination

The island of Kihavah Huravalhi, part of the Baa Atoll, is one of over a thousand islands that make up the Indian Ocean's Republic of the Maldives: of these, approximately only 200 are inhabited, making the Maldives a natural playground of discovery. Blissfully secluded, this pear shaped coral island boasts powder white sands, lush coconut groves, and a crystal clear lagoon with a nearby reef teeming with marine life and the occasional whale shark.

People

The Maldivian people descend from ancient seafaring settlers from across the Indian Ocean trading route, a diverse blend of South Asians and Muslim Arabs. While the predominant language is Dhivehi, English is understood by most.

Weather

With year round sunshine and a tropical climate, temperatures in the Maldives range from 24°C (75°F) to 33°C (91°F) throughout the year.

Currency

The national currency is the rufiyaa, with the exchange rate fluctuating approximately MVR 10 - 15 to the US dollar. Changing money is best done in Malé, with ATMs throughout the city. Resorts, however, use US dollars. Major credit cards are also widely accepted.

Arrival

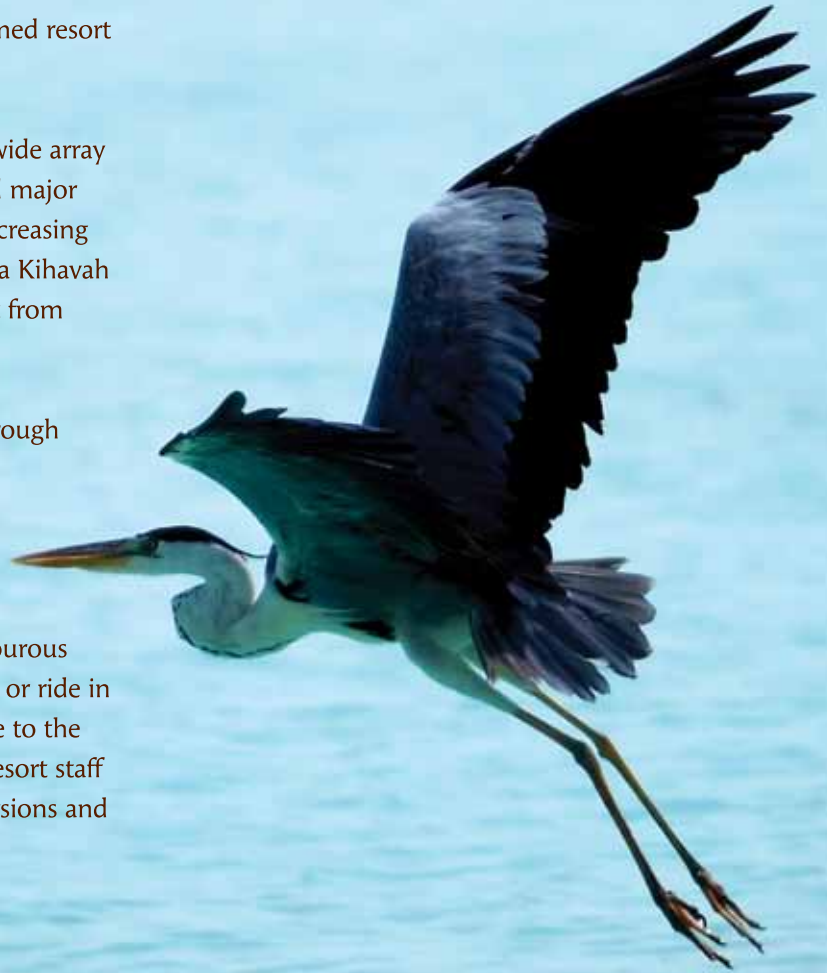

Visitors to the Maldives automatically qualify for a 30 day visa on arrival provided they have a valid travel document, return ticket and confirmed resort reservation.

Malé International Airport is served by a wide array of flights from India, Sri Lanka, Dubai and major airports in Southeast Asia, as well as an increasing number of charters from Europe. Anantara Kihavah Villas is a 35 minute scenic seaplane flight from the airport.

It is illegal to carry alcohol in any form through Malé International Airport.

Exploration

Getting around in the Maldives is a glamorous adventure in itself. Charter a private yacht or ride in a luxury speedboat to nearby islands. Take to the skies in a distinctly Maldivian seaplane. Resort staff are more than happy to arrange any excursions and transfer arrangements.
